

A mystery game in the city of Mons, Belgium. From the Angels to the Hell Hound of Mons: a World War One Experiment with Black Propaganda... Or what we would call now: PSYOPS!

August 1974. Richard Evans was found dead in a city park of Mons, Belgium. In his hands: a Polaroid, showing a strange hippie girl... and then, in a secret compartment in the house of the late Richard Evans, his grandson discovered a series of photographs, each one containing an image of the girl in the Polaroid, dated from August 1914 to 1964. It appears that during the First World War, Richard Evans worked as an agent for the British secret service and probably was involved in experiments with "black propaganda", which eventually would lead to some of the greatest myths of the Great War...

This mystery game/city game can be played online, at home or in the city of Mons, Belgium. Pass the test and discover the secrets of the secret agents of the First World War, and maybe you too will become an expert in "psychological operations" (PSYOPS), deception and disinformation!
