

Fall in Love Again: Secret to Unlock Your Man's Heart and Win Him Back
Forever

Nevaeh Michael

Copyright

© 2012 by Nevaeh Michael

All rights reserved. No part of this book may be reproduced, copied, stored, or transmitted in any form or by any means, electronic, photographic, or mechanical, including photocopying, recording, or in any information storage and retrieval systems, without prior written permission of the author, except where permitted by copyright law.

Terms of Use

The author and publisher of this book and the accompanying materials have used their best efforts in preparing this book. The author and publisher make no representation or warranties with respect to the accuracy, applicability, fitness, or completeness of the contents of this book. The information contained in this book is strictly for educational purposes. Therefore, if you wish to apply ideas contained in this book, you are taking full responsibility for your actions.

This book is not intended for use as a source of legal, business, accounting or financial advice. All readers are advised to seek services of competent professionals in legal, business, accounting, and finance field.

Contents

Introduction

How Marriages Can Crumble

His Stomach vs. His Brain

Why Other Women Succeed

The Shouldn't and the Should

The Pointers:

The Arrogant:

The Heavily Guarded:

The Rejecters:

Become the Good Woman

Learn How to Get What You Want

Negative Communicators:

Positive Communicators:

Melt Your Man's Heart

Conclusion

Introduction

There's a common script that most women tend to play out in their mind weeks before their wedding date. It's the typical happily ever after scene when your prince charming would hold you in his arms and carry you out the door for your family and friends to see.

Within that moment, you feel as if you are at the peak of your happiness. It's a blissful day for you. You're laughing and enjoying the company of the people around you.

You have nothing to complain about and your happiness is just beginning. Then, once the party ends, you drive away to live your Happily Ever After with the man that you love, hoping that the happiness will last forever.

Unfortunately, marriage doesn't play out that way. Like life, you will have your ups and downs with your husband. You'll fight and argue just like any couple and in the worst case scenario, the both of you will lose interest with each other over time.

It's a common process and there's no way of stopping it. However, there's a way to prevent it from happening all the time. The more you disagree and argue as a couple, the sooner you can grow tired with each other.

The longer you let your communication die out, the faster you'll become strangers.

In a relationship, communication is crucial. Without it, you can end up as strangers bonded together through a document, waiting for it to be ripped up so your marriage can be over.

Of course, with today's society, divorces aren't as rare as they used to be. Nowadays, it's actually quite common, which isn't a very good sign for all future couples out there.

The common saying for love is that love is like a roller coaster. Once you're strapped onto your seat, you'll be in for a bumpy ride. You'll go up and you'll fall down. You'll probably face a few loops here and there, but you'll be enjoying every minute of the ride.

Time will fly by quickly and before you know it, it's over. Well, a marriage works the same way. The only difference is that you don't want to get off the ride, but to stay on it for as long as you can. You don't want anyone else to stop the ride and get on because when that happens, you know that your relationship will be over and it'll be difficult for you and your partner to get back on the same coaster again.

When you're married, it's obvious that you will face some unhappy moments, but you shouldn't let that come across your relationship. It'll be expected that, after being together for so long, it'll be difficult to look at your partner's good side rather the bad.

Your husband is no different. The reason why you are reading this book is because you want to know why your husband was not the same man that walked you down your road of Happily Ever After.

The motivated man that you once knew is now a man that seems as if he's tired of you. He's no longer coming on to you as a generous, heart-warming husband that showers you with constant affection.

He hardly asks you about your day. The communication barrier between the both of you is starting to break and he's beginning to slowly break away from your reach.

Obviously, you don't want to let go and you don't want him to go, but you've already tried every possible method that you can think of and none of them has seem to work in your favor.

That's why this book will tell you about what you might be doing wrong and what you should be doing to regain his attention. Your goal is to shift his eyes away from his work and at you.

You want him to completely notice that you are there, not as a wife that he is married to but as a partner that he chose to spend the rest of his life loving. Though it will not be an overnight success that you might have hoped it to be, it will be something that you can work on and know that you are getting the results you want day by day.

You'll learn why you are stuck in the breaking zone while other women are happily enjoying their marriage. You'll realize what you were doing wrong and what you can correct.

You'll be able to know what's going on in your man's mind and will be able to better predict his wants and needs. By the end of the book, you'll realize something changing within you.

How Marriages Can Crumble

Marriages happen when two different people from two different worlds unite into one. That may sound a little cheesy but it's true.

You and your partner are choosing to marry each other because you love each other. You choose to marry your partner because there is something about him that you can't find in anyone else that you've been with.

The same applies for your partner. He chose to be with you because he is attracted to you. Both of your reasoning is the same, which is why the both of you are together even to this day.

Despite that, even marriages can run into an unexpected wall. It is no longer rare for divorces to occur and it is quite expected in society nowadays.

When you look at other couples in public, you would think that their relationship is nothing but bliss. However, underneath it all, is that what you truly see?

The same goes for you. When you walk out in public with your husband, you would obviously want to show society a good and happy side of your relationship. You don't want to break out into arguments in public. Yet, at home, what truly goes around between you and your husband?

The answer is right in front of you. You don't want to see yourself envying other couples for what they have. You want to see and experience the joy of what you have in your life, which is your marriage.

Just like the saying goes, "If life gives you lemons, make lemonade." Now that might not have anything to do with marriage, but the same point is being made. Therefore, if your marriage isn't working the way you want it to then do something about it.

Don't keep your lemons stocked up in your fridge. Make some lemonade to satisfy yourself with. There's a solution to every problem and taking action is already the first step of the solution.

Now, it is true that when you're married you would have to sign your name into a legal document with your partner to validate that the both of you are married to each other in the later future.

Now, that also means that the document can be terminated by will, which is the term for divorces. Know that when you are signing your name under a marriage license with your partner it doesn't mean that you are going to be together until the day you die. Even if that was part of the vow during your wedding ceremony, it isn't as if words haven't been broken before.

Even after you're married it is possible to separate after awhile. It's been done and if you're not careful enough, it can happen to you. That's why this book is written for your sake.

The most common reason as to why most married couples separate is the fact that they no longer hold that high amount of interest in each other as they did before.

They are done with each other. They no longer see each other as a partner that they hold a great amount of love for. They have returned back to friends from lovers.

There is no reason as to why they should continue a relationship that is meant to die. Thus, they split up. They leave behind all those years that they've spent together as a lingering piece of memory that will not follow them to the future. They've closed up their photo albums, and stuffed it into the back of their luggage.

Even if love is an emotion, it requires more than your feelings to maintain a relationship. You can't expect to balance a successful relationship just by how you feel about the other party.

Marriage is balanced through action and communication.

No matter how strongly you may feel about your partner, he isn't going to get the point if you don't find some way to show it to him.

At the same time, you can't expect yourself to feel his emotions if he isn't going to act upon it either. This is why communication and action is important. Of course, you can still do one without the other, but why bother when you can do both.

Think about a silent movie. None of the characters use dialect but rather actions and expressions and posture. For a character of a silent film, they can only express themselves through their movements and their facial expression.

Yet, they are still able to get their point across to the other party. Marriage is the same thing, only easier. In a marriage, you have two options of communication to your partner: show or tell.

After being married for so long, it's expected that you are going to argue about something. Communication might be the key of improving relationships but that's if you know how to do it properly.

If you and your partner are constantly at each other's neck then it will only be expected that your marriage might not last for a very long time if you were to keep that up.

Nobody wants to deal with another person's bad habits and they won't want to deal with yours.

Eventually, you and your partner will grow tired of arguing with each other and, eventually, the both of you will stop talking to each other in order to avoid any further conflict. From that, your relationship will simply start to crumble.